HISTORY

The U.S. Army has maintained a presence in the Alamo City since 1845. During that time, the installation has performed five distinct and important roles: that of a headquarters, logistical base, mobilization and training site, garrison and provider of medical support. The current mission priorities are: medical training, education and research; medical operations and patient care; and headquarters (C2).

At first, the Army leased facilities in the City of San Antonio, including the Alamo. In fact, the Army repaired the Alamo structure and added a roof so it could be used as a headquarters.

In 1876, the Army began to move its facilities to the present site of Fort Sam Houston upon completion of the Quadrangle. The post has since increased in size from the original 92 acres donated to the Army by the city, to approximately 3,000 acres today.

As it expanded, additional facilities were built to meet the Army's needs. The headquarters and garrison always have constituted one of the Army's most important commands. Prior to the Civil War, the headquarters controlled 25 percent of the Army's forces. From 1910 until World War II, Fort Sam Houston was the largest Army post in the continental United States. Many of the most distinguished American soldiers have served here, including no less than 13 Army Chiefs of Staff and two United States presidents.

The post's prominence led to significant tactical and organizational innovations. Military aviation was born here in 1910 and revitalized during the 1940's and 1950s. Large-scale troop maneuvers have been conducted, including the first effective use of the Command Post Exercise in 1911. Field exercises in the 1930's developed the Triangular Division. This streamlined, mobile organization was the foundation of the Army combat power in World War II. The delivery of troops to the battlefield by air also was tested here in 1939-41. Aeromedical evacuation of casualties was first developed here as early as 1917.

At the end of the Second World War, the Army decided to make Fort Sam Houston the principal medical training facility. In conjunction with this decision, came the determination to develop Brooke General Hospital into one of the Army's premier medical centers. Today, Fort Sam Houston is the largest and most important military medical training facility in the world.

The significant contributions of Fort Sam Houston to the United States were recognized in 1975 when the post was designated as a National Historic Landmark. As one of the Army's oldest installations, Fort Sam Houston boasts the largest collection of historic structures -- more than 900 buildings.

The installation is a dynamic and growing installation, taking on new missions such as the home of the Army Medical Command headquarters, in addition to command headquarters such as Fifth U.S. Army, U.S. Army South, Installation Management Command – West Region, Fifth Recruiting Brigade, 12th ROTC Brigade, U.S. Navy Regional Recruiting, the San Antonio Military Entrance and Processing Station, and the U.S. Naval School of Health Sciences, Bethesda Detachment.

Also located at Fort Sam Houston are Brooke Army Medical Center, the Great Plains Regional Medical Command, Headquarters Dental Command, Headquarters Veterinary Command, the Institute for Surgical Research (trauma/burn center), the Defense Medical Readiness Training Institute, and the Army Medical Department NCO Academy.

More than 27,000 military and civilian personnel work at the post, with an annual payroll and operating budget of $2 billion. Local purchases made by installation activities total almost $105 million annually. Funding for construction projects on post average $30 million annually. The 2005 Base Realignment and Closure decisions and Army Modular Force missions will result in the construction and renovation of nearly eight million square feet with a projected cost of $1.61 billion. Fort Sam Houston also has initiated public-private partnerships to renovate and adaptively reuse significant historic buildings, manage on post military residential housing and Army Lodging in addition to privatized gas and electric service.

MISSION

The mission of Fort Sam Houston is to (1) provide a trained and ready work force executing installation support services to the Fort Sam Houston military community enabling mission success; (2) mobilize, deploy, redeploy, and demobilize Active and Reserve Component Forces supporting Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom as required; (3) provide the people, infrastructure, and services to train and sustain the Army's premier medical training and education center; (4) provide base operations to the units and soldiers that execute regional, national, hemispheric and worldwide operations and call Fort Sam Houston home; and (5) provide a wide array of community services in support of our customers.

CIVILIAN COMMUNITY

Fort Sam Houston is located in San Antonio, the seventh largest city in the United States. The post area of responsibility includes 69 south Texas counties. Several municipalities are associated with the San Antonio metroplex area and Fort Sam Houston and Camp Bullis operations involve Bexar, Kendall, and Comal counties that provide community services to our personnel. Fort Sam Houston is the fourth largest employer in the region. Fort Sam Houston military housing market area consists of municipalities within a 45 minute commute from main post. Most all military and civilian personnel with local permanent addresses reside within San Antonio (Bexar County) and local municipalities in Kendall and Comal counties.
